THE STORY

> You can feel summer leaving long before it says goodbye. Some sunsets never stop following you. Every season ends in small details — a closed pool, folded chairs, two ice cubes melting in one cup — and still we pretend we have just begun. Which ending have you been quietly refusing to admit is already here?

LYRICS

Half Past Summer

INTRO

VERSE 1

The pool was closed, the gate was loose.
You stole my towel, I stole your shoes.
Your wet hair dripped across the floor.
A radio played behind the door.
The vending machine
Swallowed our change.
You kicked it twice
And laughed at the name.

PRE-CHORUS

The deck chairs had been folded.
The bar was packing up.
You dropped two melting ice cubes
Into one plastic cup.

CHORUS

Half past summer,
The sun was fading, we stayed in.
Half past summer,
Like the season couldn't end.
Our suitcases were waiting,
But we let the hours run.
Half past summer,
Still pretending we had just begun.

POST-CHORUS

Half past summer.
Not finished yet.
Half past summer.
No regrets.

INSTRUMENTAL RELEASE

VERSE 2

The hallway smelled of after-sun.
Your room key said our week was done.
The ceiling fan went round and round.
You danced barefoot without a sound.
Two empty bottles,
One borrowed shirt.
You wore my glasses
Just to flirt.

PRE-CHORUS

The postcards had been written.
The airport bus came soon.
You turned the speaker louder
And pulled me through the room.

CHORUS

Half past summer,
The sun was fading, we stayed in.
Half past summer,
Like the season couldn't end.
Our suitcases were waiting,
But we let the hours run.
Half past summer,
Still pretending we had just begun.

BREAKDOWN

The hotel wanted silence.
The neighbours wanted sleep.
You wore my shirt.
I wore your sunglasses.
We lost the room key
Somewhere underneath the sheets.

BUILD

One lost key.
One plastic glass.
One more record
Before the bus.
Half past summer.
Not finished yet.

FINAL CHORUS

Half past summer,
The sun was fading, we stayed in.
Half past summer,
Like the season couldn't end.
Our suitcases were waiting,
But we let the hours run.
Half past summer,
Still pretending we had just begun.
Half past summer,
With the checkout overdue.
Half past summer,
And the hotel blamed it all on you.

FINAL INSTRUMENTAL RELEASE

Half past summer.
Not finished yet.
Half past summer.
No regrets.

OUTRO

Half past summer...
