THE STORY

Every heart carries the same weight, different paths and different scars — but every soul is a fragile flame asking the same silent question: am I loved? Born behind open doors or forced to keep knocking, we walk different roads, yet the same fragile flame burns in all of us. What would change if we saw every stranger as one more chapter of the same story?

Human Stories (House)

VERSE 1

Some are born with open doors
Some keep knocking all their lives
Some grow up with quiet love
Some grow up with silent fights

Some are walking streets of gold
Some are walking barefoot roads
Different faces, different worlds
But the same human soul

PRE-CHORUS

Every heart carries weight
Every life holds its fate
Different paths, different scars
But we're closer than we are

CHORUS

These are human stories
Written in our skin
Love and hate, the wars within

Rich or poor, we stand the same
Every soul, a fragile flame
These are human stories

None of us alone
Searching hearts, looking for home

Some are fighting through disease
Some are breathing easy air
Some are holding broken dreams
Some are rising from despair

Some have more than they can hold
Some survive on almost nothing
Still the world keeps turning slow
Through the pain and through the loving

Every breath, every tear
Every hope, every fear
Different roads, different skies
But the same truth in our eyes

CHORUS

These are human stories
Written in our skin
Love and hate, the wars within

Rich or poor, we stand the same
Every soul, a fragile flame
These are human stories

None of us alone
Searching hearts, looking for home

BRIDGE - SPOKEN

Different lives. Different battles.
But every human heart is asking the same question:
Am I loved?

FINAL CHORUS

These are human stories
Quiet and profound
Broken hearts that still resound

Rich or poor, sick or strong
Every life becomes a song

Human stories
You and me in the same humanity.
