THE STORY

> A photograph from a younger dream, still running through city lights and believing everything — sometimes the hardest truth is realising the life we live is someone we used to be. Growing up rarely happens all at once; it comes one quiet compromise at a time, until a photograph shows a stranger with our face. Which part of who you used to be is worth bringing back?

LYRICS

Someone I Used To Be

VERSE 1

I found a photograph tonight
From a life I left behind
We were laughing in the corner
Like we had all the time

Every road was wide and open
Every dream was wild and free
But the face inside that picture
Looks like someone I used to be

PRE-CHORUS

Some old nights never leave
Some old hearts still believe

CHORUS

There's someone I used to be
Living in a younger dream
Running through the city lights
Believing everything

There's someone I used to be
Standing where I used to stand
But the road kept moving on
And I'm not that man

Now the streets feel unfamiliar
Even when I know the way
Every corner keeps a shadow
Of the life that slipped away

All the plans we made together
All the words we thought were true
Somewhere in another lifetime
They were written just for you

Some old flames slowly fade
Some old dreams never stay

CHORUS

There's someone I used to be
Living in a younger dream
Running through the city lights
Believing everything

There's someone I used to be
Standing where I used to stand
But the road kept moving on
And I'm not that man

SPOKEN BRIDGE

Sometimes the hardest truth is the one we finally see.

Sometimes the life we live is someone we used to be.

FINAL CHORUS

There's someone I used to be
Living in a younger dream
Running through the city lights
Believing everything

There's someone I used to be
Standing where I used to stand
But the road kept moving on
And I'm not that man
