THE STORY

Grief grows quieter with time, but it rarely leaves. It settles into the hum of a fridge, the outline on a rug, the pause between two songs. We learn the small talk, the brave nods, the new routes home, and from the outside it looks like moving on. Yet some losses do not vanish; they simply fold down small and change the room they are in. What remains of someone once the noise of missing them has faded?

SONG STRUCTURE

It Stayed in the Walls

INTRO

VERSE 1

I used to hear you in every room in the fridge-line hum and the stairwell gloom
I'd scan the hall like you'd still come through then catch myself laughing at what I knew

The rug kept your outline, the chair
kept score
I kept your name like a bruise in a drawer
Four winters later, the walls held fast same old ache, just a different cast

PRE-CHORUS

I learned to nod, I learned the part
like I could neatly unmake my heart
But under the small talk, under the
crowd
there's a louder truth that won't
come out

CHORUS

It got real quiet
but it stayed in the walls
slipped through the hinges
kept answering my calls

It got real quiet
and I kept on moving
but some things don't leave
they just change the room they're in

BUILD-UP

INSTRUMENTAL DROP

I stopped waiting for a midnight ring stopped reading signs in everything I took the route by the coffee cart learned my way around the softer parts

Now I can smile, now I can pass through Friday plans and the glassy flash
But in the gap between two songs
I feel that tug where you still belong

I learned to nod, I learned the part
crowd
come out

It got real quiet
but it stayed in the walls
kept answering my calls

It got real quiet
and I kept on moving

INSTRUMENTAL BREAK

BRIDGE

If moving on was that easy to do why do I still check every corner for you?
Why does one song, one face in a
crowd
drop me right back where I was somehow?

I don't need it all back in my hands
I don't need to rewind those plans
I just need the truth to set some old hurt knows my address

FINAL BUILD-UP

FINAL CHORUS

It got real quiet
but it stayed in the walls
kept answering my calls

It got real quiet
and I kept on moving

FINAL DROP

OUTRO

You don't really vanish you just fold down small

And I learned to live with the echo of it all
