THE STORY

CONTINUES “FEED THE CROWS” · WAVELENGTH TRACES, TRACK 12

Grief rarely stays where we put it. It settles into a coat left on a bench, a name lighting up a phone, the sound of keys falling on a station floor. Sometimes the only way to keep going is to hand part of the weight to something that will remember for us — the river, the power lines, the birds circling above the trees. What do we ask the world to hold when we cannot carry a memory alone?

SONG STRUCTURE

The Crows Remember Faces

VERSE 1

Down by the river line
The blue boat rocked in place
Your name lit up my phone
Like weather on my face
You left your coat on the bench
Under the station sign
I pulled it close and held it
Like it could hold back time

PRE-CHORUS

And the dark kept folding
Beneath a ragged moon
Each little thing around me
Kept pulling me to you
I heard the water talking
I heard the power lines sing
Then your shadow passed through mine
And the whole place started to ring

CHORUS

You said the crows remember faces
So I let them keep my grief
You said the crows remember faces
Now they turn above the trees
I found the phone I meant to sell
Still full of your half-spell
You said the crows remember faces
And they do, and they do

You dropped your keys at the station
They flashed across the tile
A sharp small sound in the crush of people
That stayed with me a while
I followed the river's black edge
Past the ferry gate
Every sign said keep on moving
Still I stood and waited

And the dark kept folding
Beneath a ragged moon
Each little thing around me
Kept pulling me to you
I heard the water talking
I heard the power lines sing
Then your shadow passed through mine
And the whole place started to ring

CHORUS

You said the crows remember faces
So I let them keep my grief
You said the crows remember faces
Now they turn above the trees
I found the phone I meant to sell
Still full of your half-spell
You said the crows remember faces
And they do, and they do

BRIDGE

If I call, will you come through?
If I stay, will you stay near?
There's a train far off in the distance
And my hands forget to steer
The river keeps our footprints
Then smooths them back to sand
But every time you disappear
You return with empty hands

FINAL CHORUS

You said the crows remember faces
So I let them keep my grief
You said the crows remember faces
Now they turn above the trees
I found the phone I meant to sell
Still full of your half-spell
You said the crows remember faces
And they do, and they do

OUTRO

By the river line
I hear your name
By the river line
Nothing stays the same
