THE STORY

> I did not come back. I arrived as someone else. Some journeys change us so completely that returning is no longer possible; we can only arrive as the person the road made us. The old places still recognise our footsteps, but not our face. Who did you become on the road you never talk about?

LYRICS

I Arrived As Someone Else

I knew this air before.
But not with these lungs.
I knew these lights before.
But not with these eyes.

I did not come back.
I arrived as someone else.

The floor remembers footsteps that no longer belong to me.
The glass reflects a face
I had to become carefully.

There were names in the distance,
old doors in the rain.
I carried no answers,
only proof I survived the change.

Do not ask where I was.
Some places never explain.
Do not call me by yesterday.
I do not turn to that name.

I arrived as someone else,
under lights that knew me before.
The streets kept all my shadows,
but I don't live there anymore.

I arrived as someone else,
with the silence I carried
through.
I did not come back broken.
I came back passing through.

I arrived...

Not back...

The map was still open,
but it could not read my hands.
Every road looked familiar,
every corner changed its plans.

I saw the old windows,
cold with borrowed light.
They showed me who I had been,
then disappeared into the night.

Do not ask what I lost.
Some ghosts are not for display.
Do not wait for the old me.
He could not survive the way.

I arrived as someone else,
under lights that knew me before.
The streets kept all my shadows,
but I don't live there anymore.

I arrived as someone else,
with the silence I carried
through.
I did not come back broken.
I came back passing through.

Somewhere between the gate and
the ground,
I stopped looking for home.
Somewhere between the past and
the sound,
I learned to stand alone.

And if the old world calls me,
let it call into the rain.
I am not the man who left.
I am not the man in pain.

I arrived as someone else,
under lights that knew me before.
The streets kept all my shadows,
but I don't live there anymore.

I arrived as someone else,
with the silence I carried
through.
I did not come back broken.
I came back passing through.

I did not come back.
I arrived as someone else.

Not back.
Just through.
