THE STORY

> A door of light, waiting after the dark. After enough nights, we stop asking the future for promises and ask only that its doors stay open a little longer. Everything carried through the dark becomes something we can bring with us. What would you bring if tomorrow finally let you in?

LYRICS

If Tomorrow Lets Me In

I don't know your face yet.
I don't know your name.

But I have walked through enough night
to know I am not the same.

If tomorrow lets me in,
I won't arrive empty.

There are mornings I have not met,
waiting somewhere out of view.
There are versions of my life
I have not made it to.

I am not asking for a promise.
I am not asking for a sign.
I only ask the next door
not to close before its time.

I have carried what was heavy.
I have buried what was gone.
Now I stand before the hours
that have not yet done me wrong.

If tomorrow lets me in,
I will not arrive empty.
I will bring the nights I crossed
and the voice they couldn't end in me.

If tomorrow lets me in,
I won't ask to be the same.
I have lost enough of yesterday
to walk in with my name.

If tomorrow...
lets me in...

Not empty...
not the same...

I have seen the kind of silence
that makes people disappear.
I have learned to keep on breathing
when the road refused to clear.

So if there is a morning
that has kept a place for me,
I won't enter like a stranger.
I will enter honestly.

I don't need a perfect future.
I don't need a golden door.
Just a little room to stand in
and become a little more.

If tomorrow lets me in,
I will not arrive empty.
I will bring the nights I crossed
and the voice they couldn't end in me.

If tomorrow lets me in,
I won't ask to be the same.
I have lost enough of yesterday
to walk in with my name.

Maybe I will still be learning.
Maybe I will still be late.
Maybe every open doorway
comes with something else to face.

But I am done waiting to become someone allowed.
If tomorrow wants a witness,
I am still here now.

If tomorrow lets me in,
I will not arrive empty.
I will bring the nights I crossed
and the voice they couldn't end in me.

If tomorrow lets me in,
I won't ask to be the same.
I have lost enough of yesterday
to walk in with my name.

I don't know your face yet.
I don't know your name.

But if tomorrow lets me in,
I won't arrive empty.

From me,
to tomorrow.
