THE STORY

> Some unfinished things offer a shelter we are reluctant to leave. Returning to them keeps a familiar presence close, while each visit reveals something new about the person we have become. Perhaps we need that pause until we can imagine an ending that leaves room for what mattered. If you finally turned the page, would you lose them — or discover what they left within you?

LYRICS

Leave the Story Where It Stopped

VERSE 1

You left your book turned to the same page.
I never moved the marker out.
You said you'd finish it whenever.
I never threw the chapter out.

PRE-CHORUS

The spine still cracks to that same corner.
I catch myself and read it too.
Somewhere between the lines you left there,
I still hear it sound like you.

CHORUS

Leave the story where it stopped.
I'm not ready for the end.
Leave the story where it stopped.
Some chapters shouldn't have to bend.

VERSE 2

You asked me once if I had read it.
I said I hadn't, not just yet.
Now every night I read one chapter.
I'm not sure why I never set it back.

PRE-CHORUS

The pages smell like where you left them.
I never moved them from that shelf.
Somewhere between the words you gave me,
I found some part of you, myself.

CHORUS

Leave the story where it stopped.
I'm not ready for the end.
Leave the story where it stopped.
Some chapters shouldn't have to bend.

OUTRO

Still on page twelve.
I never finished it.
