THE STORY

> A familiar voice can reach a place that time has barely touched. For a few seconds, the years fall away, and everything unfinished feels close enough to answer. We return knowing exactly what we will hear, yet some part of us still listens for a different ending. How do you say goodbye when the voice you miss is still there whenever you press play?

LYRICS

Static Silence

VERSE 1

I found the phone I swore I'd sell.
The battery somehow still holds on.
Your voicemail's saved from way back then.
I never learned to play it wrong.

PRE-CHORUS

You said you'd call me back that Tuesday.
You never did, and neither changed.
Somewhere between the static silence,
your voice sounds just the same.

CHORUS

I kept the words you never meant to keep.
I play them back when I can't sleep.
One more time before the static wins.
One more time, and I'm back where it begins.

VERSE 2

I typed your number out from memory.
My thumb stopped just above the call.
I put the phone back in the drawer now.
I couldn't make it through it all.

PRE-CHORUS

You said you'd say the rest in person.
You never got the chance to try.
Somewhere between the static silence,
I never said goodbye.

CHORUS

I kept the words you never meant to keep.
I play them back when I can't sleep.
One more time before the static wins.
One more time, and I'm back where it begins.

OUTRO

One more time.
Then I'll let it go.
