THE STORY

> Healing often happens too quietly to announce itself. It lives in small acts of care repeated through days when hope feels distant. Only later do we notice how much has changed — how something entrusted to us has flourished, and how we have grown alongside it. What if you have been growing all this time, even on the days you thought you were only holding on?

LYRICS

Still Alive

VERSE 1

You left the plant beside the window.
You said it wouldn't need much light.
I water it on Sunday mornings.
It's grown since that last night.

PRE-CHORUS

You said you'd come and check on it sometime.
You said the leaves would tell you how.
Somewhere in the growing quiet,
I think it's telling me right now.

CHORUS

It's still alive, and so am I.
Still holding on, I don't know why.
You planted something you walked away.
It's still alive, it grows every day.

VERSE 2

I moved it when I moved apartments.
I wrapped the roots in something old.
You wouldn't recognize the size now.
It's taller than the story that you told.

PRE-CHORUS

You said it wouldn't last the winter.
You said you'd bet against it living.
Somewhere in the growing quiet,
I never stopped believing.

CHORUS

It's still alive, and so am I.
Still holding on, I don't know why.
You planted something you walked away.
It's still alive, it grows every day.

OUTRO

It's still alive.
I kept it growing.
