THE STORY

> A line across the skyline, pausing before the crossing — not a warning, just a change; what was distant is finally here. Change rarely announces itself with alarms; more often it arrives as a soft, clear sign that the old map no longer leads anywhere. An ending can also be a direction. What signal have you been waiting for that is already here?

LYRICS

The Last Signal

VERSE 1

A line across the skyline
The city holds its breath
I pause before the crossing
Between the now and next
Every road behind me
Quietly dissolves
The map that I was chasing
No longer needs a cause

CHORUS

The last signal guides the way
Not a warning
Just a change

The last signal
Soft and clear
What was distant
Now is here

VERSE 2

The weight begins to loosen
The current shifts its course
No need to force the moment
No need to search for more
The past becomes a pattern
The future starts to rise
A single spark of motion
Rewrites the silent lines

BRIDGE

Every ending sends a signal
You only have to listen

FINAL CHORUS

The last signal
Leads me through
Not the ending
Just the truth

The last signal
Moving on
Where I finish
Life goes on
