THE STORY

Standing in the doorway, half in love and half in doubt — every "maybe later" a promise that quietly became never, and you were never mine.

When Later Becomes Never

VERSE 1

We were standing in the doorway
Half in love and half in doubt
You said maybe when it's better
Like better would work it out
We kept dancing round the question
Like we had another year
But the silence grew between us
Louder than our fear

PRE-CHORUS

We thought we had forever
Like time was on our side
But forever is just a whisper
When you let it slide

CHORUS

We said maybe later
We said give it time
But later became never
And you were never mine

We said when we're ready
When the stars align
But later became never
And you were never mine

I'm out of the light
My name is just an echo
In a city I don't know

VERSE 2

We were waiting for the perfect
And we let the perfect go
All the words we never said
Still hanging in the air
We were scared of losing something
So we lost it anyway

If I could turn the clock back
I wouldn't hesitate
We were waiting for tomorrow
But tomorrow came too late

FINAL CHORUS

We said maybe later
We said give it time
But later became never
And you were never mine

We said one more moment
One more perfect sign
But later became never
And you were never mine
